James Carter is Chester County High School's automotive technology teacher. James began his tenure at Chester County High School in 2012 in our Career and Technical Education department and is currently enjoying his fifth year as part of the CCHS family. A Chester County High School 1988 alumni, James entered the workforce and began developing his skills in the automotive industry that would lead to General Motors Technician Certifications, DaimlerChrysler Certifications, and ASE Master Certifications. James has over twenty years of industry experience that he uses as a foundation for his classroom instruction daily. When he's not with his CCHS family, James enjoys automotive work, hunting and fishing with family, and horsemanship. James treasures the time he spends with his family. Also, James enjoys working with students and helping them plan their next steps for life after high school. James explains that helping the students to be the best they can be ensures that we will have strong, competent leaders for our community in the days to come. James enjoys knowing that he is able to play a role in this effort to build a stronger community and shape resilient young adults.
